Mirror Nation

by Don Mee Choi (Wave Books)

“Mirror Nation offers the best of what poetry can provide—a new way of seeing. Once you have read it, it will live in you and with you for the foreseeable future. Arriving at a crossroads in the American colonial project, this collection is both testament and testimony to the corrosive forces of empire.”

Obligations to the Wounded

by Mubanga Kalimamukwento (University of Pittsburgh Press)

“Seldom does fiction so expertly capture the complications of queerness, family, dislocation, and culture. Obligations to the Wounded is a triumphant collection of unforgettable tales whose characters are as varied in identity as they are in experienced circumstances.”

Low: Notes on Art & Trash

by Jaydra Johnson (Fonograf Editions)

“Jaydra Johnson’s Low is formally inventive, bringing together art criticism and memoir, words and art into a meticulously crafted essay collection. In stunningly lyrical prose, Johnson pays a finely hewn attention to that which our wasteful, capitalistic society discards and collapses the dichotomies of high and low art.”
